Findings:

This study addressed many impediments identified in earlier studies to emphasize the impact of these barriers on women economic empowerment in Saudi Arabia. This study also focuses on culture as a significant impediment to Saudi Arabia women's participation. Below are some conclusions about each of the identified hurdles and achievements.

Obstacles: The objective of this thesis is to investigate Saudi women's challenges and achievements to economic empowerment, as well as to discuss how conceptual, normative, and regulatory elements influence the development of women's professions and the obstacles they faces.

Culture and Lack of Social Support: Cultural characteristics might be considered as a significant barrier to women entrepreneurs engaging in economic operations, as well as the lack of social support. Culture consists of a particular group or society's values, beliefs, norms and behavior patterns.

Education and Training: Training and education has also been a barrier to women entrepreneurs participating in commercial activity. Women can face the fact that some women could have less expertise in building and growing a business, particularly in comparison with men. In other words, the industry in which they start their project may not be a real business experience. If that is due to a lack of skills and knowledge, the success of the female entrepreneur might be very challenging

Vision for future: Saudi vision 2030 is specifically aimed at young people and women who once had been largely excluded from political involvement. The newly established country of Saudi Arabia with a population of more than 50% under the age of 30 is thus likely to be one of the goals of state opening up; it can apply the same logic to women as well. Young people and women considered as the Saudi Vision 2030 winners. Amongst other things, Saudi Vision 2030 aims to use women's economic power
