Introduction:
Research method is one of the crucial components of research that steers the researchers to pose styles of inquiry across disciplines. As a mandate of CPEPA, the workshop is primarily intended to initiate capacity building for research students and young faculty in diverse disciplines. The core objective of the present workshop is to equip research students and young faculty with a set of skills to prospectively undertake research effectively in the disciplines of media and communication studies and also in other social sciences. The workshop is intended to prepare research students to turn their research work into high quality publishable material in the form of articles and books. The idea simultaneously is to boost the capabilities of research students to engage, rather critically, in research activities right from identifying the problem through various stages till it reaches to its ultimate conclusion. To carry out this, the workshop will acquaint the participants with a variety of ways about how to use various methods and/or techniques in research.
