Position Holding

- ❖ Joint Secretary, Indian Association of Central and West Asian Studies, JMI.

Nasir Raza Khan holds doctoral degree in Architectural History of India. His specialization is on the history of Architecture and culture of India and its Central Asian Antecedents. His research concerns cultural heritage of India, he looks at the subject which provides a bird's view of on the assimilation of distinct cultural elements and the process of synthesisation were probed by him in particular. Have published papers on cultural history and architectural conservation in newspapers and travel Journals. He is a regular contributor to India Perspectives a magazine published from Ministry of External Affairs. He is widely travelled in Central Asian countries like Uzbekistan, Kyrgyzstan and Turkmenistan to participate in conferences and seminars.

Presently he is also working with a major project on Silk Route, sponsored by Ministry of External Affairs Govt. of India. It deals with the importance of the Silk Route from India's point of view. His first book is under publication with Manohar Publisher, Delhi.

Dr. Khan's project Revival of the Silk Route: Problems and Prospects for Indian's Trade with Central Asia deals with historical aspects of the Silk Route and provides a perspective on how and why it has come to attract attention in the recent past. It also deals with the importance of the Silk Route for India and the reason the connections between the Silk Route and India may be important today and in the future. The project contemplates with India's connections with the Silk Route – both in history and in the future. It also deals with India's relations with the Central Asian states and the prospect for cooperation through energy politics and through trade interaction. The central theme of the project is that the Silk Route should not merely be treated geographically. It offers opportunities for cultural and commercial interaction within a broad neighbourhood.
