- Induction/Orientation programme at the beginning of the academic session to establish a rapport with the students who are the real stakeholders. This is evident from the abstract of an address to the students in the previous Orientation programme listed below:
- An Address to Students of the First Semester
Orientation and induction programme at the beginning of the academic session was introduced with an objective to instruct the students about the course from time to time. Teachers and students need to communicate and interact almost on a continuous basis, if they have to build up an ideal institution together. All great things in this world begin with a vision. Every vision can be a realizable dream if we deeply believe in it and make this dream our act of faith, our creed.
- Statement of the MA Syllabus Revision Committee for Political Science
The University mandates that syllabus for all courses be revised and updated from time to time. Several faculty members had felt the need for updating the M.A. Political Science course, and bring about changes both in the content as well as the reading list, in order to align the course with the latest developments in the discipline of Political Science. The aim was to keep the revised syllabus comprehensive, yet compact.

EVALUATIVE REPORT OF THE DEPARTMENT OF POLITICAL SCIENCE

- Statement of the MA Syllabus Revision Committee for Public Administration

51. Detail any five Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities and Challenges, SWOC of the department.

Strengths

1. The Department of Political Science curriculum is regularly revised and updated which makes it relevant and more useful and are geared towards employability and career advancement. The faculty has expertise in Political Science, Public Administration, and Human Rights. There has been a continuous and regular revision and comprehensive curriculum development of various courses and programmes, three M.A. Programmes as well as B.A program with separate identities as well as multidisciplinary input under the semester system mode apart from the annual mode for private students. The Department on a regular basis organizes induction/orientation programmes for all M.A. and B.A (Hons.) programmes for fresher's covering issues related to time tables, attendance, assignment and evaluative processes. Credit transfer system is maintained wherein students opting papers offered by other departments and centres. Proficiency in English language for Urdu and Hindi medium students has been identified and addressed for differential requirements of the student population. (1.1, 1.2, 2.2.1, 2.2.2, and 2.3.14).
2. Interaction between students and faculty members is friendly and supports the career-building process of learners. A high degree of co-operation and co-ordination among faculty members leads to smooth functioning of the department. A regular series of extension lectures, seminars and conferences strengthens the academic environment and enriches the students. Visits to other institutions by faculty members are encouraged as it rejuvenates the faculty and in recent years department has encouraged exchange programmes under national bodies and MoUs. (2.1, 2.3, 2.4, 5.1 and 5.2)
3. Introduction of tutorials has facilitated regular interaction between students and faculty members. Proactive learning processes enhance and support the career building process of learners. Visit to other institutions by faculty members is encouraged. The schedules and deadlines aim to bring the best out of the students in the Evaluation Process– in terms of the enhancement of arguments, tests, term papers, analyses and presentation skills. (1.1.3, 2.4.6, 2.5.5, 7.1 and 6.3)
4. Use of various methodological approaches and different pedagogic tools from lectures to film screening & discussion, power point presentations, panel discussions, and other interactive methods are also used as an important tool of education. Faculty members are always accessible to the students for advocacy, mentoring. Faculty members are sincere, punctual, capable, dedicated, cooperative and innovative, and there is good camaraderie. (2.3.1, 2.4.10)
5. Research monitoring at the department is done through Board of Studies (BOS). The student learning and evaluation to meet fresh/future challenges is also taken care of by the Department in its meetings and through the Board of Studies. The Department also organizes various seminars, symposia, workshops, and sensitization programmes. (2.6.5, 3.1.4, 3.1.5).

Weaknesses

1. Need to seek institutional funding for internship programmes for M.A. students. Limited exposure is provided to outside world and limited programs of institutional visits in the capital city takes place due to paucity of availability of university transport. (1.2.1)
2. There has been no formal mechanism of feedback, as a system. There should be a quarterly feedback mechanism as the existing informal mechanism through subject associations is limited and not adequate. There is a need for curriculum development with participation of teachers, students and other stakeholders. Need to encourage interaction with students of other universities in Delhi. (1.3, 1.4 and 1.4.4).

3. In terms of infrastructural facilities, we need to address the problem of small cubicles for teachers, lack of a library in charge for Departmental Library, lack of facilities for power backup, A.C. pointers, and inadequate infrastructure for research. Lack of congenial space with number of classrooms, classroom size and student-faculty ratio also needs attention. There are no common rooms for faculty or research scholars (4.1, 4.1.4, and 4.4.1).
4. Currently, M. Phil programme is not being offered by the Department due to excess work load of the existing faculty; however, it needs to be introduced on a high priority basis as it would boost the research component of the department. (1.1.6)
5. No common rooms for staff or research scholars. Also, there are few teachers as area study specialists, and equally less number of supporting staff. The linguistic skills of students in both oral as well as written formats are very poor, text book readings by students are in most cases absent due to diversity of language in terms of Urdu and Hindi medium. (1.4)

Opportunities

1. Opportunities are provided to the students of the MA Human Rights (and other Masters) students for internships and jobs with national, international organizations, media, NGOs etc. In response to the emerging challenges, a well-planned exposure to national and international institutes has been provided to students. Exposure to students is also being organized through Youth Parliament in collaboration with the Ministry of Youth Affairs, GOI as an annual event (1.3, 1.4, 5.1 and 6.1.11).
2. Furthermore, increased internship opportunities and Memorandum of Understanding and affiliations with Department of Political Science from Foreign Universities, scope of Inter-disciplinary and cross-disciplinary courses, research methodology workshop in Social Sciences, sensitization workshops for students & faculty organized by the Department on issues of human rights, ethics education, capacity building, skill enhancement for the students & faculty need to be encouraged. There are internship opportunities for Human Rights Students (5.3).
3. Consultancy and projects with external agencies and bodies, accessibility of online journals in the Department's computer lab for students and research scholars are quite useful. Better use of technology through video-conferencing with universities abroad is already being tried (1.1, 1.2).
4. Among other opportunities, faculty visiting foreign countries acquire good academic exposure in consonance with new state of the art technology and pedagogical skills. Public-private partnerships in emerging academic environment need to be further explored for funding many new and ongoing departmental programmes. The Departmental associations have organized eco-fairs, human rights sensitization initiatives and programmes. (3.5, 7.2).
5. Strong network of alumni, NGOs and scholars working in various universities around the country are an important resource base for the department that can be utilised for strengthening the academic curriculum programme, research activities as well as mentoring and placement of students. (1.3 and 1.4.)

Challenges

1. The major challenge is to have better research environment to be built up adequately with open door learning policy, student records be maintained over a longer period of time. (1.1, 2.1)
2. There has been a limited link between department and its students in terms of university database, and there is need for proper e-mail and contact details of students who have graduated from here. (1.4)
3. Limited space for storing books in the departmental library and inadequate office space for faculty members of the Political Science Department in terms of basic facilities among others are some of the challenges. (4.1)

4. The existing system of guiding and conducting viva-voce for private students of B.A. and M.A programmes whom the department does not teach in a regular classroom mode is a perennial issue and huge challenge that needs to be addressed. The evaluation and invigilation of private students entails excessive workload in department office/faculty members although the Department as a collective entity and as an organic unit of Jamia appreciates the social responsibility of educating the Muslim community in general and women candidates in particular. (2.2, 2.5)
  5. The other challenge is to increase better physical connectivity by way of Metro links, feeder buses and increased timings of the main library and other learning resource centres. (4.2)
52. Future Plans of the Department.
- New innovative concurrent courses for all the three M.A Programs
  - International Seminars should be hosted in future
  - M. Phil can be introduced
  - Bringing UGC-SAP to our department
  - Continuing with intra-departmental publications
  - Need for more books and journals
  - Need for organizing international seminars and conferences
