SEC-104 Minorities Across the World: Contemporary Issues MA (SEIP), Semester-I Credits-4

Course Description:

This paper examines the challenges that various minorities face in different societies and how they deal with those challenges by politics of resistance, negotiation and accommodation. It elaborates on the idea of various types of minorities such as racial, religious and ethnic. It draws distinction between numerical and political dimension of the idea of minority. In Indian public debate, the idea of minority is so much focused on religious minority and more specifically on Muslims that it simply overlooks various other dimensions of minority identity. This paper addresses this limitation in Indian public debate and compares and contrasts various kinds of minorities, and their ways of coping with their challenges in order to challenge the reductionist definition of minority to one religious identity such as Muslims in India. By doing so, it promotes a far more comprehensive and holistic ideaof minority- and makes a strong case for how idea of minority on its own has relevance for global democracies.

Unit-I

Idea of minority – definitions and debates. Definition of minority such as numerical and empowerment perspectives. Types of minorities: religion, ethnic, and linguistic etc. And also exploration of relationships between minorities and democracy.

Unit-II

Issues and debates of minorities in South Asia, specially in India, Pakistan, Sri lanka and Bangladesh. For instance, Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Bangladeshi refugees in India; Sikhs, Hindus, Ahmadias, Mohajirs in Pakistan, Tamils in Sri Lanka, Hindus in Bangladesh.

Unit-III

Issues and patterns of majority/minority Relations: global perspectives; African Americans, Hispanics and Jews in America; Indian Diaspora, Kurds in Turkey, Tibetans in China.

SEC-105: Research Methodology in Social Sciences

MA (SEIP), Semester-I Credits-4

Course Description:

The course introduces students to the process of conducting research in social sciences and implementation of research techniques in the field. This course explores the relationship between epistemology, theory, methodology and methods.

The course provides students the techniques and the methods for conducting research in social sciences. In this course, we would be looking at the research perspective from focusing on research on the social groups which face exclusion from the mainstream and the studies done by them.

Internal assessment at the end of semester would be based on a research project formulated by individual student where theoretical aspects of research would be tested by the ground through fieldwork-based research. Students would be marked on the basis of research based on literature review and field work on the selected topic.

SEC-106: Social Movements and the Marginalized

MA (SEIP), Semester-I Credits-4

Course Description:

This course attempts to provide an understanding of social movements, theory and morphology, historical background along with case studies. It also studies the marginalized from the perspective of social movements.

The issues of inequality, poverty, development, social identity, exclusion and discrimination have often led to processes of social transformation and social change. The play of social identity in leading up to social movements will be explored in detail through the case studies in the Indian context in Unit III. We would also be looking at the issues of exclusion through these case studies and the effects of the social movements on the marginalized in the society.

Unit I Theoretical Framework and Background of Social movements

Theories of Social Movements (Liberal/ Marxist)

Contextualizing Social Movements: Old Social Movements, New Social Movements

SECX-108 (CBCS): Inclusion, Social Justice and Legislation (CBCS) MA (SEIP), Semester-I Credits-4

Course Description:

The concept of Social Inclusion has emerged as a prominent concern both in academic and more importantly in policy discourses in recent decades to achieve broader objectives of social and redistributive justice. Increasing awareness and recognition of multiple forms of discrimination, inequality and deprivation that are seen as both the causes and effects of exclusion of different sections of the citizenry from the dominant processes and paradigms of 'growth and development' have resulted in envisaging fresh legislations, policy emphasis and institutional engagements to address the issue of inclusion for the deprived and excluded sections of the society.

SEC-201: DALIT MOBILIZATION IN COLONIAL AND POST-COLONIAL INDIA MA (SEIP), Semester-II Credits-4

Course Description:

This paper attempts to understand the initiatives taken by the marginalised communities to improve their conditions in colonial and postcolonial period. Though the usage of the term 'Dalit' is laden with myriad controversies, yet this is the only term which has evolved to encapsulate an identity of the historically disadvantaged group at pan-India level. The initiatives of this group came in the form of ideological challenges to dominant mode of thinking as well as movements for specific rights. The paper discusses how colonialism opened and shaped arenas for such mobilizations. The paper delves into various forms of mobilization in three important presidencies during colonial rule. In the final section, the paper moves on to the contemporary period where Dalit initiatives are discussed in the context of contemporary democratic politics.

SEC-208: Education and Social Exclusion MA (SEIP), Semester-II Credits-4

Course Description:

The objective of this course is to examine the relationship between education and social exclusion, exploring how educational disparities and barriers contribute to the exclusion of certain groups from accessing quality education and hinder their social integration. The paper aims to deepen the understanding of the multi-dimensional aspects of social exclusion in the context of education and identify potential strategies and policies to promote inclusivity and equal opportunities for all individuals regardless of their background or social status within the education system and to reduce social exclusion. By investigating the existing research, case studies, and real-world examples, this paper intends to provide insights into how education can serve as a powerful tool in breaking the cycle of social exclusion and promoting a more equitable and cohesive society. In this paper, we would be conceptualizing social exclusion in the context of education from different perspectives and analysing the interplay between social, economic, and cultural factors influencing access to education.

Unit-I

Conceptualising Social Exclusion in relation to Education

Education/School as a possible site for Social Exclusion – mechanisms of Class, Caste, Religion, Language, Region, Abilities

Perspectives on Education- Functional, Marxist, Critical and Gender Equity

SEC- 209: Including the Socially Excluded: Issues and Challenges in Public Policy MA (SEIP), Semester-II Credits-4

This paper shall attempt to explore the politics of presence through an analysis and interrogation of ideologies and policy-prescriptions for inclusion. The course shall lent itself to understand how the dual categories of Caste Hindus and Depressed Classes ('Untouchables') gained social currency in India; the relationship between religion and community formation; temple-entry and assertive use of common resource programmes; excluded communities and attempts at their inclusion. In achieving these aims, we shall get Ambedkar's life struggles and mass inclusive policies on resource distribution and power delegation to mediate. We shall also interrogate policy level inclusive interventions at its operational field.

MA (SEIP), Semester-II Credits-4

Course Description:

This paper seeks to discuss the meaning of the concept and issues associated with secularism and communalism in modern India. These issues have been subject of political deliberation during the freedom struggle, and continue to be central to the national debate in the ongoing ideological struggle between Hindu nationalists and Secularists in India. Furthermore, it examines how secular and non- secular political parties debate these notions in the context of India's electoral politics, deliberations on minority rights, and how these discussions have shaped the nature and content of Indian democracy. Special attention is given to the rise of majoritarian politics/Hindutva, and how these issues are now debated.

UNIT-I

History and Concept of Secularism and Communalism;

Debates on Secularism and Communalism during Colonial Era: Discussions on Secularism in Constituent Assembly Debates and in Indian Constitution

SEC-304: Gender and Politics of Exclusion MA (SEIP), Semester-III Credits-4

Course Description:

The Course Gender and Social Exclusion will engage with interdisciplinary perspectives to develop an understanding of processes that cause and perpetuate gender inequality. Students will be introduced to the core concepts of gender, basic theories of feminism, how the intersecting categories of gender, and other markers of inequalities become institutionalized and change over time. Students will be encouraged to explore and analyze gender in the complexity of its construction over time and in multiple settings and sites, locally in the Indian contexts as well as globally. The courses curriculum builds upon scholarship in gender studies, both international and Indian, incorporating the new interdisciplinary agendas, debates and changing methodological practices.

Unit-I

In this Unit students will be introduced to the core concepts of gender. Through foundational readings students will be enabled to develop an understanding of the broad theoretical currents of feminist thought. It will also enhance students' understanding of how feminist thought has emerged, developed and evolved in response to various historical, social and political challenges.

- 1. Core Concepts of Gender, Patriarchy, stereotyping, Public Private dichotomy, Empowerment
- 2. Global Women's Movements and Rise of Feminism
- 3. Feminism(s):
  - i. Formative Feminisms: Liberalism, Marxist Feminism, Radical Feminism, Socialist Feminism

SEC-306: Conflict, Violence and Exclusion

MA (SEIP), Semester-III Credits-4

Course Description:

Conflict and violence are a stark reality facing the modern world. People both in the developed and developing world have been and still are both victims as well as perpetrators of violence and for large number of people conflict and violence has become part of their daily existence. This paper will seek to introduce how violence can be both a cause as well as consequence of conflict leading to exclusion of a 'category'. The broad focus would be on exclusion leading up to the study of three core areas: situations of conflict, forms of exclusion during conflict and exclusion in post conflict situations. This paper will also attempt to explore how conflict is often used to legitimize and reinforce the notion of the 'other' or 'enemy', thus in turn legitimizing exclusion itself. Through examination of different case studies of past and present, the paper will attempt to outline a relationship between conflict (state sponsored, ideological, reactionary etc.) and exclusion (social, cultural, economic and political).

Indian Constitution is one of the most extensively debated and deliberated social document of not just India but entire world. This documented has judiciously borrowed form a majority of the constitutions of various nation states both old and new. This paper seeks to make a humble attempt towards making the student understand the basic philosophy which shaped the making of this historic document. This paper will further attempt an interface with the deliberations on group rights in the constituent assembly debates and how the notions like minority rights were debated and finally included in the main body. The paper will also attempt to understand the possibilities of the idea of social justice vis-à-vis the contentious issue of reservations and affirmative action.

SEC-408: Politics, Development, and Ideology: Muslim Education M.A. (SEIP), Semester-IV Credits-4

Issues, Intricacies and Identity in the politics around Muslim-minority education

In this course, we shall dwell more in history, particularly a period before 1900. We shall begin from the beginning to interrogate educational backwardness among the Muslims. Founding tenets of Islam shall be explored through a study of life and times of Prophet Muhammad and his immediate caliphs, then explore the role of ashrafization in the development of community politics and people's mobilisation around the Educational movement centring around Aligarh. The course will be primarily taught from the sources cited below. But students are free to add more to the teaching material.

UNIT I

Learning and Identity: Aligarh's First Generation of Educationists

Syed Ahmad Khan's biography and his writings shall be the main material to teach under this unit. The idea is to understand motives, challenges and legacy of Syed Ahmad Khan.

SECX-402: Doing Ethnography (Ability Enhancement) (CBCS) MA (SEIP), Semester-IV Credits-4

Course Description:

This course is intended to introduce students to ethnography both as a method and product of research. The course will acquaint students to the different facets of ethnography combining a theoretical and practical approach.

Students will carry out a small ethnographic research project in or near Jamia Millia Islamia in which they will develop a research question, employing the various ethnographic and participant observation methods learnt during this course, and write an ethnographic piece about them. This practical dimension will feed back into the classroom discussions wherein they will reflect on their ethnographic research practices and reflect critically about their own role in the research. The students will be required to present their writings in class. The tutorials will involve reading an ethnographic monograph.

Unit-I

The first part of the course will contain an introduction to ethnography, particularly understanding how ethnography is both a method and product of research through reading and classroom activities. Students will also be introduced to the concept of reflexivity and how that in turn impacts our research and writing.

- 1. Ethnography: An Introduction and What does it mean to do ethnography
- 2. How to Begin
- 3. Reading an Ethnographic Monograph
- 4. Reflexivity

Unit-II

The second unit focuses on ethnographic research methods. The emphasis will be on developing ethnographic skills and understanding how to apply these skills for example how to employ the various ethnographic and participant observation methods learnt during this course.

- 1. Ethnographic Research Methods
- 2. Participation and Observation
- 3. Ethics in Ethnography
- 4. Reflecting on researcher in the field: Applying Reflexivity

Unit-III

The third unit focuses on how to make sense of ones fieldwork, analyse findings and synthesize it into ethnographic writing. It will facilitate students to think about areas of research interest, arrive at a specific research question, employ participant observation methods learnt during this course, and execute a small research in and around the Jamia Millia Islamia. Write an ethnographic piece.

- 1. Making meaning and Analysis
- 2. Doing Ethnography:
- 3. Ethnographic Writing,
- 4. Visuals
- 5. Films
