November 17-19, 2014

First Announcement

About the Conference

Viruses interestingly enjoy space between living and non-living world. They infect humans, animals, plants and several other organisms also and quite often pose a great burden by causing diseases. With the help of fast evolving techniques and technologies the researchers are predominantly involved in assigning the molecular reasons to host pathogen interplay. Hence the field of Molecular Virology and the associated research areas are continuously occupying the central space in order to fight against the viral diseases. The Centre of Interdisciplinary Research in Basic Sciences, Jamia Millia Islamia, New Delhi is going to organize a three-day national conference on the topic, "National Conference on Recent Trends in Molecular Virology-2014" from November 17 to 19, 2014. The conference on Molecular Virology would have special focus on understanding the molecular basis of infection and pathogenesis. In addition, other aspects of viruses, for instance- life cycle, immune response, host-viral interactions, plant viruses and significance of virology research in day to day life would also be addressed. Knowledge related to current advancements in research in the area of vaccine development, prophylactic and therapeutic interventions in viral infections would also be included. Eminent scientists and researchers from all over the country are expected to share the platform of this meeting to enrich the participants and students with their views, ideas, experiences, and findings related to fast emerging burdens of viral infections and their counter measures more particularly the respiratory viral diseases and gastrointestinal and hepatic viral diseases. The aim of this conference is to bring together basic virologists, molecular biologists, immunologists and clinicians to make the meeting maximally meaningful and productive.
