ANATOMY OF A RESEARCH

Chinmaya Lal Thakur is an Assistant Professor of English at Shiv Nadar University (Institution of Eminence), Greater Noida, Uttar Pradesh. He earned his Ph.D. at La Trobe University in Melbourne, Australia, for his study of the representation of subjectivity in the novels of David Malouf. His academic interests include postcolonial literatures and cultures, modernist writings, the contemporary novel, modern Indian intellectual history, and Continental Philosophy. Besides, he loves watching movies and is a cricket enthusiast.

Chinmaya understands his research interest to be located at the intersection of postcolonial studies, Deconstruction, and modernist writing. In this talk, he will attempt to explain the trajectory of the development of this interest with examples from his M.Phil. work on Franz Kafka's novels and his Ph.D. thesis on the novels of David Malouf. Towards the end of the talk, he hopes to outline some of the research work he is undertaking currently and is likely to pursue in the near future.
