Aparna Dixit is a student of Women's Studies. She is very keen to understand the subject from her very perspective and try to develop some research work in the field of women studies. However, She is a poet from her heart but these poems are not mere impression of her imagination rather reflection of her understanding to life and it's complications. Presently she is associated with Sarojini Naidu Centre for Women's Studies, Jamia Millia Islamia as a Research Assistant since June 2013. She has her Mphil and UGC NET in Women's Studies. Her Mphil Work is based on "Marriage Symbol Politics: in context of Hindu Married Women". Presently, she is pursuing her PhD on "Socio-Economic Profile of Muslim Women Chikan Workers: A case of Lucknow" She has been trying to add some articles /research papers, small booklets and translations to the subject and always get involved in the seminars and conferences as a presenter and participant. She is also associated with Indian Association for Women's Studies as a life member.
