Rural Camp

As a component of the curriculum, a rural camp is organized to familiarise students with diverse settings, a crucial aspect for future social work professionals. The graduating batch's 10-day camp in Dewas, Madhya Pradesh, facilitated by faculty members, provided a firsthand look at rural life and the functioning of various institutions. In collaboration with the hosting organisation, Samaj Pragati Sahayog (SPS), the programme covered topics of rural development like livelihood, water conservation, health, and nutrition. Activities included field visits, participation in self-help groups (SHG) and village panchayat meetings, and interactive sessions with professionals. VALUE ADDITION

Individual Conference

Individual Conferences (ICs) are confidential weekly sessions where students engage with their assigned faculty supervisors, addressing fieldwork challenges. Supervisors actively listen, bridging theory and practice, assessing progress in fieldwork objectives, and guiding students in dissertation projects. ICs also foster self-reflection, enabling students to recognize strengths and areas for improvement, and offering a comprehensive support system for academic and personal growth.

Group Conference

Group Conferences (GCs) are integral to fieldwork training, serving as a platform for collaborative exchange between students and faculty supervisors. In these sessions, students present fieldwork issues, initiating group discussions. Occurring twice in the course, GCs allow students to gain hands-on experience in crafting academic presentations, moderating discussions, and deepening their understanding of diverse social work contexts. Instrumental for practical experience, GCs foster peer learning, enhancing students' proficiency in addressing real-world challenges while providing valuable insights into the complexities of the field.

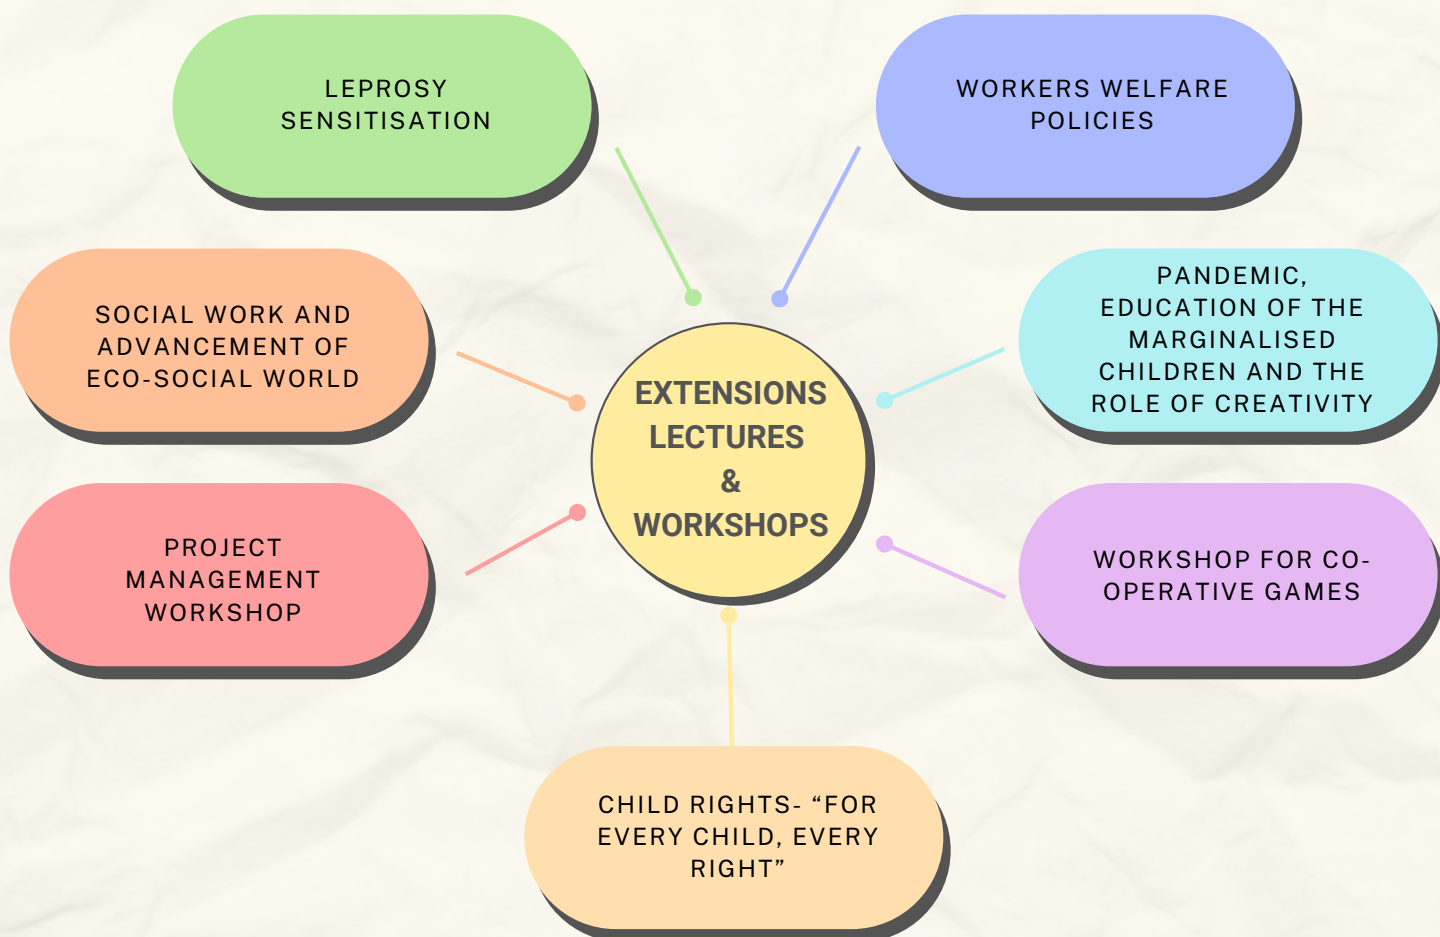

Student Exchange Programme

The Department of Social Work hosts a student exchange programme with the University of Applied Sciences in Erfurt, Germany. This initiative allows the students to learn about social work practice in a different cultural context, while simultaneously welcoming German students to engage in classroom learning within the department. Accompanied by faculty, ten master's students from the department are selected for this programme. The experience enables them to travel to Germany, where they actively engage in seminars and conferences addressing critical topics in social work practice. Beyond enhancing the students' educational journey, the programme fosters profound cross-cultural understanding. It serves as a pivotal opportunity for participants to broaden their perspectives and embrace diverse approaches to social work in different cultural contexts.

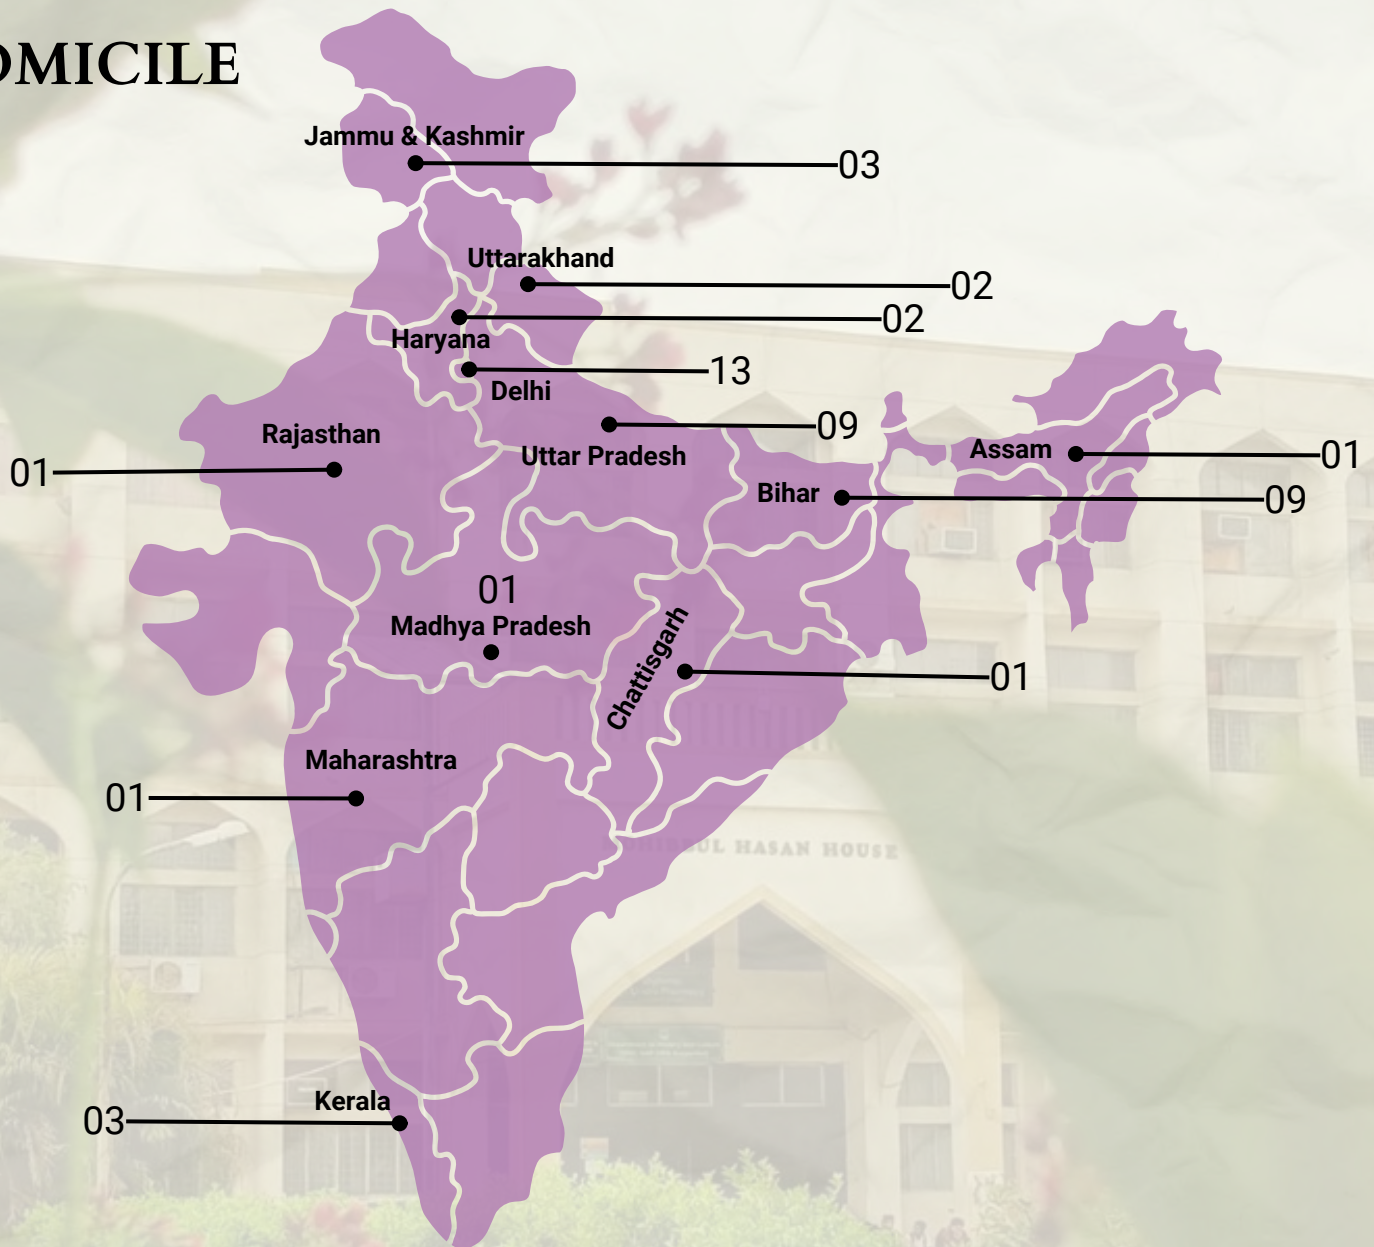

Extensions Lectures and Workshops

To enhance the students' development, the department regularly arranges extension lectures and workshops addressing diverse social issues and themes, thereby complementing the existing curriculum. Over the course of two years, our students have had the privilege of attending numerous such sessions, facilitated by experienced professionals from outside the university who serve as valuable external resource persons.
